

Coal Ash Spills Too Dangerous To Reveal To Public, Says DHS

Friday, 12 June 2009 12:17 - Last Updated Friday, 12 June 2009 12:21

---

Just how bad has the coal ash situation gotten in the United States? So bad that the Department of Homeland Security has told Sen. Barbara Boxer (D-Calif.) that her committee can't publicly disclose the location of coal ash dumps across the country.

The pollution is so toxic, so dangerous, that an enemy of the United States -- or a storm or some other disrupting event -- could easily cause them to spill out and lay waste to any area nearby.

More...