

Scientists have developed new ways to cool the brains of heart attack and stroke victims to protect them from damage and help save lives.

Among the inventions, reported in New Scientist magazine, are a cap that blows cold air across the scalp.

More...