

The frozen remains of two mice infected with the bubonic plague are missing from a New Jersey bioterror research facility, and the facility waited seven weeks to report the incident to federal and state authorities.

Officials with the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey in Newark, where the remains went missing, and FBI officials, said the missing mice pose no public health threat.

This is the same facility where three live plague-infected mice went missing in September 2005. Officials concluded those mice died.

TVNL Comment: Remember this if "al Qaeda" conduct a bio attack on us. Remember the source.

More...