

US ships arms to aid fight against Islamist militants in Iraq

Sunday, 16 March 2014 17:49 -

The US embassy to Iraq says the United States has delivered 100 Hellfire missiles, along with assault rifles and ammunition, as part of its anti-terrorism assistance to the country.

In a statement issued on Sunday, the embassy said the delivery was made earlier this month in order to help bolster Iraq forces fighting a breakaway al-Qaida group known as the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant.

The statement promised to send more weapons to Iraq in the coming weeks.

TVNL Comment: Let's keep those wars coming, folks. We don't want the Military Industrial Complex to lose a single opportunity. After all, peace is never profitable.

More...