

FBI is investigating whether Sandusky 'shared boys with a wealthy backer of the football program'

A man has come forward alleging he saw Jerry Sandusky and a prominent Penn State University donor sexually abusing two boys together aboard a private plane, it was claimed on Monday.

Until now, authorities have believed that Sandusky was a lone abuser. The newest allegations threaten bring out more horrifying revelations about sexual abuse surrounding the once-prestigious college athletics program.

Investigators with the US Postal Service are also examining Sandusky. They have seized his computers and are looking into allegations that he sent 'seductive letters' across state lines -- including to some of his victims.

Federal investigators are currently working to verify the allegations against the booster, who remains unnamed. The alleged witness reportedly included specific information like times and places.

TVNL Comment: This is the real reason why Joe Paterno and others ignored the crimes...they knew it was part of a major fund raising effort.
