

President Seems To Have Hard Time Abiding By Law

By his deeds you shall know him; preemptive war, torture and wiretapping, for starters.

He has governed with threats -- and by nourishing fear in the American people.

But it is no joke that he has found ways to circumvent the constitutional restraints of his office with signing statements and secret directives.

Bush also has been able to execute his power grab by playing the fear card -- and with hardly a peep from a cowed Congress.
